

Contact Mike McGrath

mikem@ncl.org

720 446-9102

303 571 4343 (after June 16)

Ten Communities Named 2013 All-America Cities

June 16, Denver, CO—The National Civic League tonight named the ten winners of the 2013 All-America City Awards, an honor given each year to towns, cities, counties, neighborhoods and metropolitan regions for outstanding civic achievement.

Listed alphabetically by state, the 2013 All-America Cities are:

Birmingham, Alabama	Downey, California
Montrose, Colorado	Peoria, Illinois
Dubuque, Iowa	Owensboro, Kentucky
Dunn, North Carolina	Garner, North Carolina
Thomasville, North Carolina	Norfolk, Virginia

Since 1949, the awards program has recognized more than 650 communities for addressing local challenges with innovative, grassroots strategies that promote civic engagement and cooperation between the public, private and nonprofit sectors.

Hundreds of civic leaders and community volunteers met in Denver June 14-16 to exchange ideas and present their stories of positive change to a jury of civic experts. Members of each delegation described in detail their community's response to a range of challenges, everything from joblessness, to housing deterioration from the mortgage crisis to providing health care for returning veterans. (This year's awards had a special focus on communities that implemented programs to recognize or assist veterans and military families.)

The 2013 awards celebration opened with a welcome message from Denver Mayor Michael Hancock, chairman of the National Civic League Board of Directors. "Through your applications, preparations and presentations you have already demonstrated the qualities we look for in an All-America City--collaboration, innovation, inclusiveness and a can-do spirit," he noted in a video statement to the delegates. "In the eyes of the National Civic League Board, staff and All-America City volunteers, every community here is a winner."

Steve L. Muro, Under Secretary for Memorial Affairs, U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, who gave the keynote speech, described the communities' presentations as "powerful."

"You've gathered around a goal," he told the enthusiastic crowd of civic achievers. "You've gathered around issues that need to be corrected, and you've put your best foot forward. Whether you are city managers or volunteers, you did the best you could to make things change, to make the future better."

Among the finalists were: Brush, Colorado; Colorado Springs, Colorado; Fort Lauderdale, Florida; Miami Lakes, Florida; Sarasota County, Florida; Natchitoches, Louisiana; Canton, New York; Folly Beach, South Carolina; The Colony, Texas and Platteville, Wisconsin.

“This is the good news about America’s communities,” said Civic League President Gloria Rubio-Cortes. “These incredible community solutions are all around. People across the country are working hard on these issues every day of the year.”

2013 AAC sponsors include The Piton Foundation, The Campaign for Grade Level Reading, Southwest Airlines – The Official Airline of the All-America City Awards, PCL Construction Enterprises, El Pomar Foundation, Greenberg Traurig, Merrick & Company, Google, BBVA Compass, the City of Aurora, Colorado, the City of Lakewood, Colorado, Carl & Lily Pforzheimer Foundation, FirstBank, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

NCL is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization that strengthens democracy by increasing the capacity of groups and individuals to participate in and build healthy and prosperous communities. NCL publishes the Model City Charter and the National Civic Review, and conducts programs, research and technical assistance on topics like fiscal sustainability, transportation-oriented development, environmental stewardship, racial equity and immigrant integration.

National Civic League
303 571 4343
www.allamericacityaward.com

1889 York Street | Denver, CO 80206 US